One possible version:

Sadly, the week went by quickly, and the time for Claire to leave arrived. After she left, I cried, feeling my soul being empty again. I entered her room and looked at the pictures she had drawn, remembering the time we had spent together. As I was packing them in a box, a sheet of paper fell on the floor. I picked it up. It was a picture of Claire and me, with a note reading, "I love staying with you."

I rushed to the orphanage and told her that I wanted to stay with her too. That was how I adopted her. When I brought Claire home, she hugged me tightly, asking whether she could call me Mom now. I immediately nodded as I hugged her back happily, saying, "I'm your mom. I'll always be there for you." From that day on, I never felt lonely. A child got her mom, and a lonely soul got a loving child.

One possible version:

With the development of the social economy, more and more advertisements appear in people's lives.

On the one hand, advertisements help people have a better understanding of various products. Some advertisements add new things to people's lives. On the other hand, sometimes advertisements exaggerate the functions of goods and mislead consumers. Some advertisements even contain unhealthy content, which has a negative effect on teenagers' mental health.

To sum up, advertisements have both good and bad sides. When faced with plentiful advertisements, we should keep a clear mind so as to be immune to their influence.

To encourage the students to take outdoor exercise, our class went mountain climbing last Sunday.

We gathered at the school gate at 7 am and left for the destination. After arriving at the foot of the mountain, we climbed in groups. Halfway up the mountain, we were tired, but we worked together and finally reached the top. Looking down from the top, we were deeply shocked by the scenery below.

At 2 pm, we returned to the school and the activity was a great success. Not only did it get us close to nature, it also promoted friendship among us.

One possible version:

I nodded excitedly. Soon we saw the car. My dad got in and checked it, finding it could run well. But it looked ugly. I hesitated for a moment. Then I stepped into the car unwillingly and said, "Let's buy it." "I'm not buying," Dad replied firmly and got out. Surprised, I begged, "You could buy it. I'd pay you back." I thought maybe weeks later, he'd forget all about that arrangement.

Looking at me calmly, Dad said, 'You could go to the bank and borrow money to buy this car.' On the way to the bank, I refused to speak to him. When reaching there, he agreed to co-sign for the loan, but he said he wouldn't make the payments if I quit my job. I had to agree. After buying the car, I was inspired to work hard for car payments. Now I've had a good job, a big house and two beautiful cars. I'm thankful that Dad inspired me to be independent and take an adult responsibility.

One possible version:

Generally speaking, traditional Chinese medicine (TCM) originating in China is based on observation of the human body, while Western medicine originating in the West is based on evidence.

The two of them have some differences. TCM treats illness by way of generalization, while Western medicine treats illness by the symptoms. TCM takes time to work but has no or few side effects, while Western medicine works quickly but often has side effects.

It's hard to say which is better. Each has its strengths and weaknesses. Sometimes, a combination of TCM and Western medicine may work better.

All of the students in our school attended the lecture. To impress the students deeply, Mr. Smith showed us some pictures and video clips. Everyone listened to it attentively.

The lecture not only enriches our knowledge, but also promotes our intercultural communication competence.

He hesitated for a moment and closed his eyes, praying. Then he poured the water from the bottle into the pump carefully and pumped it. Soon, he heard a bubbling sound, and water started pouring out. His face lit up and he smiled with relief. He drank the water and filled his bottle. Then he refilled the bottle and put it back in the corner. After feeling much better, he looked around the cottage again.

Then he saw a pencil and a map. The map explained the direction to the nearby village from the location of the cottage. Looking at the map, he knew where he was and in which direction to go. He was happy that his faith in the water pump worked. Similarly, he believed that the map would direct him to the right place. Then he wrote in the map, "Have faith. It works." Happily, he left the cottage.

Here are some of my fantasies. Cars will be flying just
